ASG RELEASES 2018 Q2 ASIAN SKY QUARTERLY

HONG KONG, August 08, 2018 — The 2018 Q2 edition of Asian Sky Quarterly is now available from Asian Sky Group (ASG), a Hong Kong business aviation consulting firm. The quarterly update which focuses exclusively on the Asia-Pacific business aviation market, pre-owned business jets and civil helicopters, offers valuable insights into the current market conditions and trends making it essential reading for prospective buyers or sellers or industry professionals.

“Over the course of the last 12 months, the business jet market has swung almost 180 degrees from where it was in Q2 2017 to where we find ourselves in Q2 2018 seeing the emergence of a strong seller’s market manifested by lower inventory levels and rising prices. This last quarter saw a much higher level of business jet transactions (96) than the second quarters of 2017 (83) and 2016 (70),” says ASG Managing Director, Jeffrey Lowe. “However, optimism, which has been on a steady rise since Q2 2016, finally plateaued in the last quarter. So despite the overall strength of the market at the moment, we are seeing small pessimistic feelings popping up which could be an ominous trend for the future.”

The 2018 Q2 edition of Asian Sky Quarterly also provides the usual insights on the Asia-Pacific region: market intelligence and trends; data on the mood of the Asia market from its quarterly survey; and availability and prices for specific pre-owned aircraft types.

This issue also features a country profile on business aviation in Australia; an in-depth look at the pre-owned Hawker 800 series market; and a spotlight on Cessna’s new Citation Longitude and Latitude aircraft. Avion Pacific Limited’s Vice President Bei Zhuang, who works closely with ASG, discussed her work and insight on the general aviation industry in Mainland China.

Asian Sky Quarterly is available digitally in English and Chinese. For copies of all ASG’s reports, please visit www.asianskymedia.com.
